Welcome to Student Health! While the beams and windows of the building may glisten with newness, City College of San Francisco Student Health Center has been providing accessible and cost efficient health care to students for around 49 years. The faculty and staff of Student Health are honored to continue this partnership with students so that wellness and educational goals will be achieved. The Student Health Center provides services that range from emergency and acute episodic care for treatment of diseases from asthma to sexually transmitted infections, psychological counseling, and multiple health promotion programs.

CCSF was one of the earliest community colleges to address the AIDS epidemic and other sexually transmitted infections. The health care service was also a forerunner that actively set up policies of non-discrimination in its risk assessment and prevention education programs. Student Health Services has played a key role in advocacy, dissemination of information, and linkages to essential treatment resources for students, many of who unknowingly had infections or who would have been at high risk for infections. At CCSF risk assessment and HIV/ STI testing for the students has been in place for over a decade as part of the greater community's responsibility to protect sexual health. In this effort, Student Health has developed a distinct array of services adopting a combination of holistic and specialized approaches, centering on honesty, non-judgmental care and empathy. Support for students is provided by experienced nurse practitioners and healthcare workers from the SF City Clinic and HIV counselors from the Department of Public Health.
